The Marble Arch.—A handsome monument in the style of the Roman Arch of Constantine, was originally erected by Nash, at the entrance of Buckingham Palace, at a cost of £80,000. In 1851 it was removed to the Cumberland Gate of Hyde Park. For many years it stood amid most inharmonious surroundings, but thanks to the initiative of Mr F. W. Speaight, the L.C.C. improved the approaches, thus further enhancing the picturesque appearance of this famous London landmark.
